Nary Ly: 'My dad deserves justice'

Cold case. More than a year since Don Ly was murdered, his children plead for closure.

Nary Ly, daughter of Don Ly, who was killed in front of his South Philadelphia home on April 18, 2013, longs to find her father's murderer. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Around mid-afternoon during the work week, Nary Ly sometimes can be found sitting near the circular fountain at Logan Square — crying.

"Where are you going today?" her co-workers will ask.

"And I say 'I'm just going to go out to the park and cry by myself,'" Ly said.

Since the murder of her father, Don Ly, last year, Nary, her three siblings and their mother live without closure.

Don Ly, 68, was stabbed to death on April 18, 2013 as he prepared for work early that morning. Police have not yet found his killer.

On Thursday, Ly will hold a news conference at Tony Luke's on Oregon Avenue at 1 p.m. and will again plead for help in finding her father's killer.

"If anyone knows anything or [saw] something, do not be afraid to say," said Ly. "We desperately need help finding this person. My dad deserves justice. He did not deserve to die this way."

Don Ly, who for 20 years sold fruit from a cart at 34th and Walnut streets in University City, brought his family to the United States in 1990. Ly said her father didn't have any enemies. This adds to their grief: the lack of a "Why?"

Don Ly's killer didn't remove his victim's wallet or jewelry. "It makes no sense to me," Ly said.

"There are no arrests," said Officer Jillian Russell, a police spokeswoman, "and the case is still currently under investigation."

Ly said she frequently calls detectives for updates on the case, and that their reply is, typically, "no leads yet," and "We're going to search until we find this person."

"It's very tough," Ly added. "Some days it's OK, but most days I wake up and say, 'Who is this person?'"

Visit Metro.us for surveillance video of the alleged suspects.

"This person still walks on the street, and someone might be a victim again, like us."

Logan Circle. Homeless man, 23, sexually assaults sleeping woman

A homeless man has been charged with attempted rape after a 31-year-old woman said he sexually assaulted her at Logan Circle while she was asleep.

Nico Natividad allegedly was crouched over the woman with his hands in her underwear when she awoke, police are alleging. The woman had fallen asleep in the park on Tuesday morning shortly before noon.

The two struggled but the woman was able to run away, according to police. She contacted authorities, who arrested Natividad, 23, and transported him to the Special Victims Unit. The woman was treated at Saint Joe's Hospital and released. METRO

Suspected Nazi living in Philly dies before extradition

Case closed.
Breyer never got his hearing.

A suspected Nazi who stood guard at Auschwitz prison camp, but lived in the Northeast a majority of his adult life, died the night before a judge ruled he should be extradited back to Germany, reports said.

The lawyer of Johann Breyer, 89, told the Associated Press Wednesday that his client — who was admitted to the hospital on Saturday — died in a Philadelphia hospital Tuesday night.

On Wednesday, U.S. Magistrate Timothy Rice agreed to extradite Breyer back to Germany to face trial for his alleged war crimes during World War II.

Rice told the news service that "Breyer, the individual before this court, is the same person sought for aiding and abetting murder in Germany," and "No statute of limitations offers a safe haven for murder."

According to court documents, Breyer was accused of aiding in the death of more than 216,000 Jews while serving at Auschwitz.

While Breyer said he did indeed serve at the camp, he denied hurting anyone. He moved to Philadelphia after the war.

Breyer's background

- The United States government tried to revoke his citizenship in 1992 when it learned of his past.
- In 2003, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals found that because Breyer was only 17 at the time — too young — he could not be held accountable.
- He was arrested in June after the German government issued a warrant for his arrest.

Statewide. Five areas are unhappy: Report

According to a study conducted at both Harvard and the University of British Columbia, five cities within the Pennsylvania borders are home to many unhappy people.

The study, which identified the unhappiest regions in the country, released by the U.S. National Bureau of Economic Research, is based on a life-satisfaction survey. Its findings conclude that people are willing to forgo happiness for cheaper rents, lower mortgages and higher-paying jobs.

"Our research indicates that people care about more than happiness alone, so other factors may encourage them to stay in a city despite their unhappiness," said study co-author Joshua Gottlieb in a news release.

"This means that researchers and policy-makers should not consider an increase in reported happiness as an overriding objective."

Rankings

Under the "top 10 unhappiest metropolitan areas with a population greater than 1 million (as of 2010)" heading, Philadelphia was ranked No. 10 while Pittsburgh was No. 2.

Over the river

The study also ranked the happiest metropolitan areas with a population greater than 1 million of 2010.

- The counties of Middlesex, Somerset and Hunterdon came in at No. 10 on the list. Richmond-Petersburg in Virginia took No. 1.

Scranton was ranked No. 1 under the category "the least happy American regions." Erie ranked third while Johnstown came in at No. 6.

New report

US scientists urge 'national vision' to curb coastal risks

A group of top scientists has called for a fundamental change to how the United States deals with risks to its Atlantic and Gulf coasts from storms and climate change in a National Research Council report released Wednesday.

Urging a "national vision" toward addressing coastal risks, the report comes on the heels of a Reuters analysis published earlier this month showing that coastal flooding along the densely populated Eastern Seaboard of the United States has surged in recent years, with steep financial consequences. Six indicted in global StubHub cyberfraud

StubHub said in a statement that their systems weren't affected. / GETTY IMAGES

New York. StubHub said authorities around the world were investigating organized crime in the ticket industry.

EBay's online ticket exchange StubHub was targeted by hackers who used stolen passwords and credit card numbers to buy and sell thousands of tickets for pop-music concerts and Yankees games, New York authorities said.

Six men were indicted, including two Americans arrested in New York and New Jersey, a third American who is wanted, two Russians whose whereabouts are unknown and a third Russian awaiting extradition from Spain, where he was detained in front of a Barcelona hotel while on vacation, Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance Jr. said.

The scheme, including at least another four accused money launderers, who were arrested separately in London and Toronto, shows criminals' "sophistication and speed" requires international cooperation, Vance said.

The two Americans who were arrested and arraigned in New York state court, and the third American indicted is expected to turn himself in soon, Vance said. Data from their Gmail accounts shows they knew the tickets were acquired illegally, he said.

Vadim Polyakov, 30, and Nikolay Matveychuk, 21, are charged with using stolen data to buy the tickets, according to a statement from Vance's office. Polyakov was detained in Spain, while Matveychuk hasn't been apprehended. Sergei Kirin, 37, a Russian who advertised his money-laundering services online, also hasn't been arrested, Vance's office said. BLOOMBERG

Anatomy of the scheme

This is how the scheme unfolded according to Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance Jr.:

1. Two of the Russians stole personal data online and used it to buy tickets on StubHub for events including Elton John and Justin Timberlake concerts, the "Book of Mormon" on Broadway and prime seats at Yankees Stadium.

2. The three Americans were fences who re-sold the tickets online shortly before the events.

3. The third Russian helped launder the money abroad.

The bodies of the first victims from a Malaysian airliner shot down over Ukraine last week arrived on Wednesday at a military base in the Netherlands — a nation in shock and sorrow. Bells pealed and flags flew at half mast in memory of the 298 people killed when flight MH17 came down in an area of eastern Ukraine held by Russian-backed separatists, in the first national day of mourning since Queen Wilhelmina died in 1962.

A military guard of honour stood at attention as a trumpeter played The Last Post, the military funeral call for people killed in war.

Relatives of some of the victims were at the airport but were shielded from the media, officials said.

Gaza. Fighting and bloodshed escalates, airlines shun Israel

Palestinians mourn for their dead relatives. / GETTY IMAGES

Gaza fighting raged on Wednesday, displacing thousands more Palestinians in the battered territory as U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said efforts to secure a truce between Israel and Hamas had made some progress.

"We have certainly made some steps forward. There is still work to be done," said Kerry, on one of his most intensive visits since the peace negotiations he had brokered broke down in April.

In a blow to Israel's economy and image, U.S. aviation authorities and many global airlines banned flights to Tel Aviv for a second day, spooked by rocket salvoes out of the Gaza Strip.

REUTERS

Pressure on Israel

U.N. High Commissioner for Human Rights Navi Pillay said there was "a strong possibility" that it was committing war crimes in Gaza.

- She also condemned indiscriminate Islamist rocket fire out of Gaza, and the United Nations Human Rights Council said it would launch an international inquiry into alleged violations.

Fatal landing

Plane crashes in Taiwan, takes 47 lives

A TransAsia Airways turboprop plane crashed on its second attempt at landing during a thunderstorm on an island off Taiwan on Wednesday, killing 47 people and setting buildings on fire, officials said.

The plane, a 70-seat ATR 72, crashed near the runway on the island of Penghu, west of the mainland, with 54 passengers and four crew on board, they said.

No one was killed or hurt in the buildings. Eleven injured people on the plane were taken to hospital, the government said. REUTERS

The good kind of juicing

Nicky Hilton. Try her recipe for a post-workout smoothie that will keep you going.

Some people can roll out of bed right as their alarm goes off. And that alarm isn't set for 20 minutes before they have to leave for work; it's early enough to head to the gym for a workout before much of the world has had its coffee.

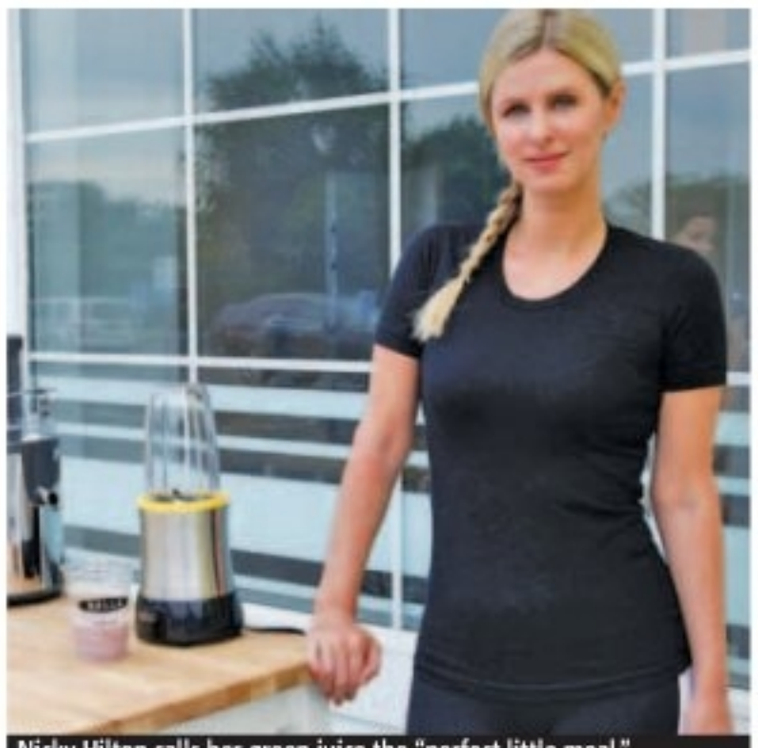
That must be nice.

For those of us who are still working on working out — and trying not to crawl back into bed right afterward — here's something to get motivated: a quick, energy-packed fruit smoothie.

Nicky Hilton recently dropped by SoulCycle in the Hamptons to make a post-spin smoothie with the Bella Rocket Extract Pro ($60, BellaHousewares.com). As a Californian, drinking her fruits and vegetables isn't new to her. "There's a big juice culture in L.A., so I've been into it since I was a teenager," she said.

Bella's grinding blades crush everything from whole nuts to chia seeds, so there are no chunks left in the smoothie without adding calories through yogurt or watering it down with ice. And instead of reaching for java to get going, Hilton also juices with Bella's High Power Juicer ($100), combining kale, celery and cucumber for the right amount of energy before exercise: "It's the perfect little meal."

It's good to have goals. Until working out becomes its own reward and you're greeting 6:30 a.m. with a smile, try this one-step juice recipe.



Nicky Hilton calls her green juice the "perfect little meal."

Recipe. Bella Berry Smoothie

Ingredients

- 5 strawberries
- 1 banana
- 1 handful blueberries
- 1 handful almonds

As a workout enthusiast, Hilton prefers to have her smoothies working for her, too. "Bananas are high in the good kinds of carbs you need after a workout and help rebuild damaged muscles and provide lots of potassium," she said. (Potassium supports movement from nerves to muscles and helps with kidney function, too.) "Almonds have protein to keep you full and satisfied post-workout and add texture to the smoothie. But I really like the sweet fruits, so the strawberries and blueberries are perfect."

Directions: Combine all ingredients and blend until smooth. Detach the tumbler, snap on the lid and sip it on the train. Makes two servings.

CULTURE

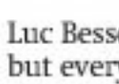
Quoted

"I try to write good parts for men, good parts for women. Especially in the '90s and '80s, it was always about the men with big muscles. The girl was there to cry and that's it. I love when the women are strong and when the men are weak."

Luc Besson, on why he's drawn so often to women who kick ass

KING OF WEIRD ACTION

Luc Besson is French, but everyone in America knows him. Since the '80s the filmmaker has sought to do Hollywood-type films in France, with more than a mere Eurotrash flavor. He regularly redefines what we consider action stars. He's brought you parkour, Liam Neeson as a tough guy and the concept of a space jail. Here are some of his innovations in a field that doesn't always welcome them.



MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Scarlett Johansson becomes good with a gun in "Lucy." / JESSICA FORDE

1989

'Nikita,' aka 'La Femme Nikita'

Girl with a gun

The '80s teemed with big dudes with big muscles and bigger guns. Besson distinguished himself — from far off France — by arming a hot woman (Anne Parillaud). The film that launched a franchise (recently a show with Maggie Q) watches as a junkie is turned into a killing machine, and one who doesn't rough up her dress as she shoots down marks.

1994

'The Professional,' aka 'Leon: The Professional'

Quiet French guy, 12-year-old girl

Besson finally came to America, but did it his way — which is to say by ignoring what would generally be considered good American taste. Not only does he put guns in the hands of pre-teen Natalie Portman, he has her develop a kind of relationship with the assassin (Jean Reno) who becomes her savior.

1997

'The Fifth Element'

Acrobatic female embodiment of an element

Originally conceived when he was 16, Besson's sci-fi beast continued his trend of casting powerful women whom he would then marry. It happened with Parillaud and it happened with Milla Jovovich, who gave her all as she babbled a made-up language — faring better than Jodie Foster in "Nell," no less — and smacked up aliens.

2002

'The Transporter' series

Throwback

With "Nikita," Besson broadened the scope of what constitutes an action star. By the early aughts, the old type had fallen out of favor, to the point where a ripped, bulletheaded, taciturn badass like Jason Statham seemed like a throwback. A paid driver who takes jobs moving questionable cargo, he's not above pointlessly ripping his shirt off and taking out a room of baddies armed only with a hose.

2004

'District B13'

Parkour god

The "holistic training discipline" in which ridiculously agile people who can traverse obstacles (walls, staircases, gaps between buildings) without breaking their speed is a no-brainer for action movies. And it was Besson who first capitalized on it, putting star David Belle in a dystopian thriller that gave him plenty of chances to strut his stuff. It wrought a sequel and the remake "Brick Mansions."

2004

'Taxi'

Supermodel bank robbers

In France, since 1998, Besson has milked four films out of his action-comedy "Taxi" series, about a hapless cabbie who solves crimes, sometimes with a pre-Oscar Marion Cotillard. When he brought it to America, he gave his hero (now Jimmy Fallon) the series' weirdest adversaries: a gang of bank robbers all played by models, including Gisele Bundchen.

2005

'Unleashed'

Ass-kicking manimal

Jet Li rarely gets the chance to play more than just a guy who brings the pain, but Besson knew he could play one thing outside his wheelhouse: a man raised from birth by a crime lord (Bob Hoskins) to be a fighting man-dog. When he escapes his confines, he's trained in the art of being human by a blind pianist (Morgan Freeman) and his stepdaughter (Kerry Condon).

2008

'Taken'

Ass-kicking older guy who starred in 'Schindler's List'

It seems silly now, but there was a time when Liam Neeson was little more than an Oscar-nominated thespian. But Besson sensed that at 56 he was ready to finally shoot guys repeatedly in the head. Thanks to him, it now seems weird when he does a Scorsese drama about persecuted Jesuit priests (i.e., next year's "Silence").

2012

'Lockout'

Old-school wisecracker

Besson worked with Bruce Willis in "The Fifth Element," but he kept him penned-in, rarely letting Willis cut loose with his signature brand of cynical, weary jokes. Turns out he was saving that shtick for Guy Pearce, who does a shockingly spot-on Willis impersonation as the grumpy hero who has to rescue the president's daughter from a space jail.

2014

'Lucy'

Person with unlimited brain capacity

Besson exploits a dumb myth — that we only use 10 percent of our brain — but for a good reason: to make an action movie. Scarlett Johansson is dosed with a drug that gives her command over her entire brain, and with it all matter. After a while it's not even an action film, but one that tries to solve the mysteries of the universe.

Reluctant action hero

"LUCY" IS SCARLETT JOHANSSON'S LATEST ACTION FILM.
GETTY IMAGES

Interview. Scarlett Johansson is forced to imagine herself in the predicament that befalls her character in "Lucy."

Scarlett Johansson is no stranger to action, but her latest requires she play both brain and brawn. In "Lucy," she's a party girl accidentally hopped up on a drug that gives her magical powers. It's a gimmick that plays on the myth that we only use 10 percent of our brain.

Some think the average person uses 10 percent of their brain capacity. How much do you reckon you actually use?
At any given moment, I'd say between 2 and 12 percent — it depends. On an everyday basis, I'm going to go with 9 or 11 percent.

What do you think would be different about you if, like your character Lucy, you had full access to your brain capacity?
The idea of the film is that as you evolve in one way, you kind of devolve in the other — you dehumanize, I guess. Because the experiences that we treasure as human beings are irrelevant in the grand scheme of things. ... It's really that we exist purely to survive and pass on information at a genetic level.

It's like living in a world with zero emotion.
Right, because you have no judgment of the things that you're feeling because you can't relate them to yourself in any way.

I guess the message here is that it's not that good for us to be too intelligent.
Well, I don't know! "Good" is a relative term; maybe we're able to live more of a "life" by being blissfully ignorant.

ScarJo's got a gun

What's the trick to handling weapons when you're not exactly super buff?

You gotta drive it like you own it! And have a lot of confidence. But I've spent so many hours in weapon training that at this point I have a fairly good handle on guns.

Good thing to put on your CV: Can hold a gun.

Yeah. I never expected that to be the case but here I am, four Marvel movies later. ... With this one under my belt, I guess I'm the reluctant action hero.

If you could wake up one morning and be an expert in something, what would you want to be?
Lucy's teleportation ability seems pretty convenient.

Where would you go?
I'd use it for getting around New York so that I wouldn't have to bother with a train or a taxi. You just imagine yourself uptown and you're there. And an instant vacation would be good. You have a couple of hours off and you decide to teleport yourself to Paris in the Roaring '20s.

And what about a dream skill?
I've always admired musical virtuosos. I want to be the first violin.

Why the violin?
It sounds like the most complicated! Either that or something bizarre like being the world's greatest

Scarlett Johansson gets handcuffed to a mysterious briefcase in the beginning of "Lucy." / JESSICA FORDE

Theremin player.

What kind of training did you do for this movie?
Luckily I'm pretty well-versed in that. It's in my job skills just from working on so many Marvel movies. I've handled a lot of weapons and done a lot of fighting. When I came to do "Lucy," I think I'd just finished the second "Captain America," so I was pretty set for another full-on action experience.

The movie begins when your character gets handcuffed to a briefcase. If you had to be attached to something for 24 hours, what would it be?

Visit Metro.us to read reviews of 'I Origins' and 'Happy Christmas.'

If I had to be stuck to something, hopefully it would be cute and cuddly like a French bulldog puppy or something I wouldn't mind carrying around. I'd rather a soft little kitten.

Judging Linklater's 'Boyhood'

Review

'Boyhood'

Director: Richard Linklater

Stars: Ellar Coltrane, Patricia Arquette

Rating: R

• • • • •

Time passing. The director's latest experiment follows the life of one kid over a dozen years.

Ellar Coltrane is captured from childhood to his late teens in "Boyhood." / IFC FILMS

"Boyhood" follows an ordinary boy named Mason Jr. (Ellar Coltrane) as he grows up. Thing is, he really did grow up. Richard Linklater shot the film piecemeal over 12 years, observing Coltrane and actors Patricia Arquette and Ethan Hawke. How'd he do?

Presentation

"Boyhood" would be worthwhile even if it had been phoned in. Take the "Up" documentary series, which has checked in on the same group every seven years since 1964. "Up" doesn't break from its sometimes-wearying formula, yet it's mind-blowing simply because watching people age really does blow minds, even if the lives are routine. The "Up" films and "Boyhood" remind us that we all age and that mortality looms.

Conduct

"Boyhood" isn't phoned in. Because the footage shot in 2002 has to mesh seamlessly with what was shot in 2009, it has a plain style. But Linklater never shapes his segments the same way. Mason Jr. is introduced, at 6, as the son of a divorced couple: harried mom (Arquette) and "cool" slacker dad (Ethan Hawke). He stays with mom, who drags him around. This means there's variety and a real story, even if it's one with giant time leaps that bury key events (marriages, jobs, births, relationships) in ellipses.

Smooth moving

Agility

Clocking in at almost three hours, "Boyhood" only has about 13 minutes for each segment. Yet it retains Linklater's patented leisurely pace. He doesn't even tell us when he's jumped ahead, we just have to guess from changing hairstyles and context clues when a year has elapsed. Linklater couldn't have predicted how Coltrane — not to mention Arquette and Hawke — would change over the 12 years. But there's a shocking control and unity to the storytelling, with details and lines that resonate the longer it goes on.

Accuracy

Mason Jr. doesn't exactly have a normal life, but he still winds up a certain type: a sarcastic know-it-all who tends to hide behind a strangely affable smirk. He thinks the machine of life won't eat him up, but it very well could. By the end, a whole life seems to have been lived, and yet there's still so much left. "Boyhood" feels like it could go on forever.

Spy games. Philip Seymour Hoffman goes rogue in one of his final screen performances

Review

"A Most Wanted Man"

Director: Anton Corbijn

Stars: Philip Seymour Hoffman, Rachel McAdams

Rating: R

Philip Seymour Hoffman plays an anti-terrorism head in the John Le Carre adaptation "A Most Wanted Man." / KERRY BROWN

One of Philip Seymour Hoffman's final films drops him into the murky world of spy novelist John Le Carre. He plays the head of an anti-terrorism team in Hamburg trying to find a Chechen refugee sought by other agencies.

The lowdown

Le Carre's works can be packed silly with plot, which is why — 1965's excellent "The Spy Who Came in from The Cold" excepted — they tend to make better miniseries than movies. (Anyone able to follow the "Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy" without having read the book deserves to join Mensa.) His 2008 novel is all plot too, to the point where there's no room left for characters, apart from the moments of personality smuggled in by the film's many terrific actors (among them Rachel McAdams, Willem Dafoe and Robin Wright).

But in the lack of characterization lies the film's secret power. We have no one to trust. This is Le Carre's world: the one where everyone is only somewhat knowable, and probably to some degree dangerous. This is better in retrospect, once all the pieces are in place, than it is in the moment. Only in the final sequence does the film and particularly Hoffman — who till then plays shlubby, boozy, slow and depressed — spring scarily to life. Would this caper boast the same power if the whole film was at that pitch? Probably not. But what power it commands now comes at a cost. MATT PRIGGE

Hangout movie. A pair of old pros team up

Michael Keaton and Diane Keaton attempt sparks in "And So It Goes." / CLAY ENOS/CLARIUS ENTERTAINMENT

What

Michael Douglas and Diane Keaton have never acted before, so finally here they are, playing a bickering widower and widow who live in the same New England fourplex and who may or may not hesitantly fall for each other. (Spoiler: They do.)

The lowdown

At some point Hollywood stopped making movies like "And So It Goes" — well, not exactly like "And So It Goes." To put it crudely, some of them used to be good. "And So It Goes" is not; it's slapdash and amateurish at times, hardly deserving the two commanding legends at the center.

Times have changed, financing for these things have gone down and director Rob Reiner seems to have lost the touch he once, in the 1980s, had in spades. "And So It Goes" wants to be an old school Hollywood hangout movie, where you simply congregate a lot of talented people, give them a minimal plot and let them go.

But there are too many moving parts and conflicting tones here, and Reiner isn't the kind of party master who can keep them in control. World-weary sobriety gets interrupted by cloying sentimentality plus terrible jokes. A better stylist could have whipped this into shape, but Reiner doesn't even seem to be trying. MATT PRIGGE

Head trip. Luc Besson's movies revel in stupidity. His latest also revels in brilliance.

Review

'Lucy'

Director: Luc Besson

Stars: Scarlett Johansson, Morgan Freeman

Rating: R

IS 'LUCY' DUMB OR SMART? IT'S BOTH!

Scarlett Johansson can touch time as the superpowered hero of Luc Besson's "Limitless"-esque "Lucy." / JESSICA FORDE

Stupid

In the newest from Luc Besson ("The Fifth Element," "Taken"), Scarlett Johansson plays a student forced to become a drug mule whose package leaks inside her stomach. The contents happen to be a radical drug that gives one increasing command of one's brain power. Like "Limitless," it buys into a tirelessly debunked old wives' tale: that we only use around 10 percent of our brains. That's bull.

She also can soon control all matter. She can change her hair, make her enemies float or knock out a hallway full of armed cops with a flick of her finger. This notion — that we could actually manipulate space and time with accelerated smarts — is even dumber than that we only use a fraction of our brain power.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Besson nevertheless insists on dumb thrills. There's a car chase that rips off "Ronin" by having Lucy speeding confidently into oncoming traffic. And there's an irrational bad guy (Choi Min-sik).

Smart

Besson wisely goes in a wildly different direction, however, than he did in "Limitless," in which Bradley Cooper's character used a similar drug to make money. He was selfish, whereas Lucy is selfless. Her superpowers make her lust for knowledge, and she looks up a neurologist played by Morgan Freeman, who does little but stare in befuddlement at the insanity around him.

But Besson runs with the idea without looking back. Lucy quickly loses interest in smacking around her enemies, which is effortless for her. And Besson smartly recognizes that a movie with an unstoppable, invulnerable hero should be something more than a dumb action movie. If "Lucy" is "Limitless," it's "Limitless" with more than a dash of "The Tree of Life" and even a bit of "Under the Skin," the movie in which Johansson played an alien seductress.

It confirms that Johansson is right now peerless at playing inhuman. As Lucy's brain power increases, she's forced to lose her fear, her love and all her human traits. It's "Under the Skin" but in reverse.

Stupid-smart:

Luc Besson is a crazy person

Besson has confidence in his half-silly convictions. And it's weird. Besson has a very European lack of good taste. This translates into a concentrated, 90-minute blast of over-the-top action and trippy philosophic philosophy, and one that ends on a hilarious final gag that says it all.

Gosling and Mendes didn't plan that pregnancy

It looks like fans weren't the only ones surprised by news that Eva Mendes and Ryan Gosling are expecting a baby. "It was completely unplanned," a source tells Radar Online of the pregnancy. "Ryan was surprised, especially because they had broken up early last year, only to get back together." Gosling is apparently totally on board with the idea now that he's gotten over the shock of impending fatherhood, and there seems to just be one more issue for the couple to tackle: where to put the crib. "[Ryan's] house is quite small, and only has two bedrooms," the source explains. "Eva has been looking for a bigger house to live in with Ryan once the baby is born." Boy, I hope these two scrappy kids can get a mortgage.

Ryan Gosling (holding Anthony Pizza) and Eva Mendes had a kid in "The Place Beyond the Pines." ATSUSHI NISHIJIMA, FOCUS FEATURES

Cowell insists he's not gay (not that there's anything wrong with that)

Simon Cowell would like to take this opportunity to reiterate that he is not, in fact, a homosexual. The talent show guru's name came up unexpectedly in court in the U.K. last week when a recorded conversation found Cowell's ex-manager, Gareth Varey, and a man identified as Mazher Mahmood discussing whether Cowell is gay. Well, Cowell's rep is a little bit more than eager to point out that this is all patently untrue, making sure to toss in the mandatory "not that there's anything wrong with that" clause.

Backstory

Getting personal

Khalifa, born Cameron Jibril Thomaz, put Pittsburgh on the hip-hop map with his 2010 city anthem "Black and Yellow." He's released a string of hits since then, along with two hit albums, 2011's "Rolling Papers" and the 2012 follow-up, "O.N.I.F.C."

His forte has been stoner raps, party jams and mid-tempo ballads — most of which reveal a dimension of himself; his enjoyment of herb is a common theme.

"I enjoy knowing a lot about artists that I'm a fan of," he says, "so when it comes to making my music, I try to do the same thing."

It's well into the third year of Wiz Khalifa's hip-hop- and herb-themed Under the Influence of Music tour.

This year's lineup features Khalifa along with Jeezy, Ty Dolla Sign, Sage the Gemini and more. Dem Boyz look to blow the lid off the Susquehanna Bank Center in Camden on Friday.

"I feel everybody just likes the fact that they can come out and enjoy themselves and not only be safe but feel comfortable being who they are," Khalifa says. "There are older fans, [and] some of them are brand-new fans. We do what we can do to make everybody feel involved."

Khalifa's tour has been gaining in influence even though you can count the number of hip-hop package tours on one hand. The tour debuted in 2012 with fellow Pittsburgh rapper Mac Miller co-headlining, and last year ASAP Rocky was on board.

"The live performance is really important to go along with the music," Khalifa says of keeping the tour going. "It gives the fans another experience."

This might also be the moment when Khalifa moves from hip-hop celebrity to cross-over star. A new album, "Blacc Hollywood," drops Aug. 19. The lead-off single, "We Dem Boyz," has been viewed 26 millions times on YouTube.

Can a No. 1 album debut be next?

"I hope so — each of my other projects came out at No. 2," he says. "This time it's really strong, and it's got a really good buildup."

RAPPER WIZ KHALIFA'S NEW ALBUM, "BLACC HOLLYWOOD," IS SET TO DROP AUG. 19.

Creativity on the fly

Interview. Zac Posen talks the speed-related challenges of being on "Project Runway."

ZAC POSEN BRINGS PLENTY OF REAL WORLD EXPERTISE TO BEAR ON HIS JUDGING FOR "PROJECT RUNWAY," WHICH PREMIERES TONIGHT AT 9 ON LIFETIME.
GETTY IMAGES

"Project Runway" may have been on for a few years now, but it's got an inherently fresh premise. Since it's a show based around creativity, every year the designers bring all new ideas to the competition. We talked to judge and designer Zac Posen about what keeps him coming back to the show after three seasons.

On what the best challenges are: "My favorite challenges every season are the alternative material challenges because all of a sudden you get to see how far the creativity of these designers can go. ... Very rarely are you able to finish something perfectly or the way you would do something with the actual proper time it takes to make a beautiful piece of clothing. ... There's people who are sort of magic, who have the talent of being like a magic seamstress and pattern maker and they can zip out pieces that are totally mind blowing fast."

On what it takes to win: "I wish that a lot of designers ... instead of interpreting what is already out there ... listened more inside their own voice about what they have to say that's unique to the world. That becomes a key winning designer for us, when you see someone that is pushing the boundaries and showing us something new. The imagination is infinite, so it's quite a joy to watch this experience."

Guest judges

Bringing the celeb A-game

"Runway" often brings in guest celebrity judges to spice things up. Posen says the variety of judges can mean they bring a simple, yet important, element of "Would I wear this?" while others bring a more in-depth understanding. Expect to see Elizabeth Moss, Julie Bowen, Dita Von Teese and Amanda de Cadenet this season. Posen still enjoys mixing it up with his usual judging compatriots, Heidi Klum and Nina Garcia, though. "We're all very strong minded in our ways," says Posen. "But there's always that camaraderie and respect toward each other."

Madewell sleeveless shirtdress

$118, Madewell.com

Masculine shirting takes a feminine twist

Designers such as Christian Dior and Nina Ricci (above) showed their version of the wardrobe staple on the spring /summer '14 runways.

GETTY IMAGES

We love throwing on our boyfriend's shirt and a pair of jeans — so we're happy to report that the borrowed-from-the-boys look is going strong this summer, thanks to the shirtdress. The preppy staple transitions from office wear (throw on heels) to weekend attire (with your Chucks) so flawlessly it might replace the strappy frock as your summer go-to.

Ask Charles: Readers get real-world advice

No one keeps it more real than relationship expert Charles J. Orlando. This week, he answers questions from readers and gives them the lowdown on love.

Dear Charles:

I went on a first date with a guy and I thought it went well. He texted me about an hour later and asked if we could get together again and I said I'd like that. We playfully chatted via text for a few hours that same day. One week later, I haven't heard a thing from him. Why did he ask for a second date and not set anything up if he wasn't interested?! – A

Dear A:

First dates offer you a glimpse of who the person is, but you don't really know them; you just have an impression, and they have one of you. There's no telling what was going on behind the scenes for him: multiple dates with multiple people, just out of a prior relationship, busy work schedule or family issues. The fact that he didn't get back in touch after putting in the beginnings of effort, however, is a red flag. After all, it just takes a moment to communicate if something has changed for him.

Dear Charles:

My boyfriend and I have split because I don't trust him. On several occasions he has been talking to other women. I don't think he's done anything physical (apart from when we had a short break and I asked him not to but he still did). He says he doesn't see anything wrong in talking to women even though I made it clear it wasn't acceptable. He said he did it to make himself feel like he still "had it" and wouldn't have met up with any of these women. I love him so much, and everything else about him is perfect. He says he won't do it again, but he has said that before. Would I be a fool to take him back? – M

VivaGel is a new antiviral lube that, when paired with a condom, claims to be 99.9 percent effective against STDs.

A new study reveals that cheating is not only more commonplace today, but that women are cheating more than men. (Related: Clearly this is the market for VivaGel.)

Dear M:

A man who is really with you won't need to validate himself by seeing if he still "has it." My gut reaction is that he is playing you, and you said that he's done this before. You told him that it's unacceptable, but then you took him back. And what that REALLY means to him is that it IS acceptable to you. My advice: Move on. If he's playing these games now, what will happen later? He needs to be real with you and confident in his decision to be with you, and you alone — and until he does, you are better off without that relationship. He has to choose, and you need to realize you're worth someone's best treatment.

Cabaret

'Andy: A Popera'

Through Sunday
The Wilma Theater
265 S. Broad St.
$10-$25, 215-546-7824
www.wilma theater.org

The Bearded Ladies are putting on this eccentric cabaret about Andy Warhol as a precursor to the troupe's big collaboration with Opera Philadelphia in March. It portrays denizens of the pop art icon's famous Factory, such as Edie Sedgwick and his muses Marilyn Monroe and Elvis Presley as assistants in a Warhol lecture by the suspiciously named Warhol expert Dr. Peter P. Never.

Changing with the times in Fairmount

Hot chef. Michael McNally discusses changes in the Philly food scene — and dishes on Volver.

Michael McNally has been in the kitchen at London Grill for almost 25 years. / PROVIDED

Since 1991, Michael McNally has been the chef and co-owner at Fairmount's London Grill. Over the years, he has evolved to keep up with the times — adding a menu of small plates, for example — but some things are stalwart staples, such as the restaurant's 20th annual Bastille Day block party, which took place earlier this month.

How was the Bastille Day celebration?
Fantastic. Everybody had a great time. [Co-owner] Terry [Berch McNally, Michael's ex-wife] goes kind of crazy with it, and it's always getting bigger. It's become a big community thing for a lot of people.

You guys have been here for nearly 25 years. How have you seen the Philadelphia food scene change, and how do you keep up with it?
Oh it's evolved a lot, especially in the last half dozen years or so. We've always been a restaurant with a classic appetizer-entree-dessert menu, but now there's the small-plate trend. That took me a little while to get used to! We've learned to change with what people want. Maybe we've even changed a little too fast over the years, but we've learned lessons from that, too.

Do you live in Fairmount?
I used to, but I moved to Roxborough. At first I just hated it, but I like it a whole lot now. I've adapted to it, and it's gotten a lot nicer. And I like that it gets me away from the restaurant a little, rather than being right around the corner.

Q&A

Iron Chef

Are there any places that you like to grab a drink or a bite?
It's ever-changing. Something new is always opening up. I went to Volver a couple of weeks ago. Now that was interesting. The food was phenomenal, but it is a show. We were there for about four hours and went through 15 courses. The waiter tells you a story about each dish, too. But it was great, and the place is beautiful.

The Weekly Yelp. We all scream for ice cream

Remember when there were several inches of snow outside? Yeah, we don't either. Winter might be a distant memory, but that doesn't mean you can't get a little frostbite this summer. We highly recommend picking up a tasty cone or a cup of "wooder" ice at one of these cool spots!

Italiano's

2551 S. 12th St., South Philly
I had the urge for water ice and was in the neighborhood. Yelp to the rescue! Went with old reliable cherry. It tasted so fresh, and before I finished, I got back in line for a pina colada. Man, I wish this place was in the burbs! FRANK P.

John's Water Ice

701 Christian St., Bella Vista
You hear about something for so long and wonder if it really measures up to the hype. John's Water Ice lived up to its reputation. The chocolate water ice had a perfect, delicate, mild chocolate flavor. It did not taste artificial and wasn't cloying. TOM M.

La Michoacana Homemade Ice Cream

231 E. State St., Kennett Square
Flavors such as corn, avocado, etc. seemed right at home in the Kennett area. ... Everything was so smooth and creamy and tasty. ... All in all, all four flavors were equally delicious, no weak links or do not repeats. LAUREN C.

Maple Shade Custard Stand

340 W. Main St., Maple Shade, N.J.
Vanilla cone with chocolate dip is just perfect — best soft serve in the area. It's one of the places you take for granted growing up in the area, but it truly is awesome! MICHAEL W.

Honesty, not positive thinking or being evasive, is the best policy for job applicants

Re: 'Three ways to prove your career expertise' (Metro, July 22) During the 20-odd years that my colleagues and I interviewed applicants for IT positions, we encountered a few who followed Timothy Sykes' advice to "point ... in the direction of what you actually do know" rather than admit you don't know something.

We would silently nod at each other, scribble a small "BS" annotation on our notes and usually ignore anything further the applicant said.

Maybe things are different in the millionaire-stock-trader business, but among people who actually create things, a willingness to be straightforward and admit "I don't know" — and then proceed to find out ASAP — is (or at least once was) considered a valuable asset.

If you read all of Sykes' advice carefully, you'll notice that none of it "proves your career expertise"; instead, it proves your ability to persuade people through social engineering that you have expertise, whether you do or not.

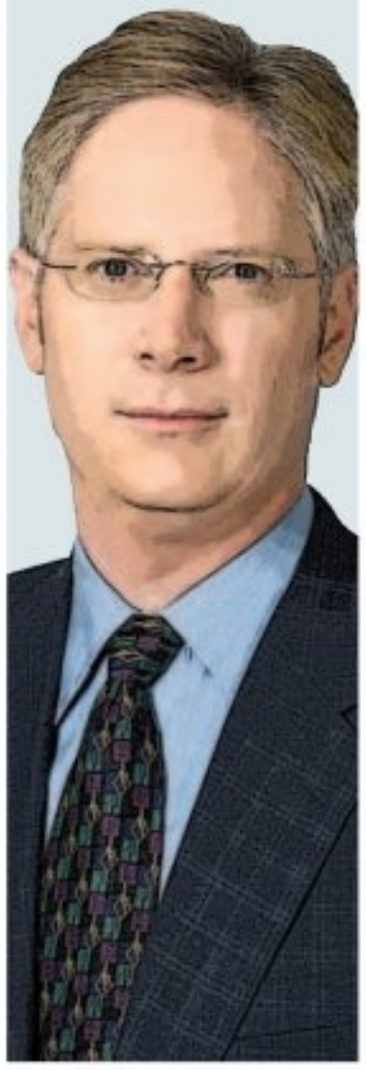
AMERICA'S CHIEF CALLS COLLECT

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN



CNN=POLITICS

Some things are so obviously good that when they come along we wonder why it took so long: hot-dog-stuffed pizza crust, "Orange Is the New Black" and the permanent deportation of Justin Bieber, to name a few. (I know that last one hasn't happened, but a guy can dream.)

Other things are so patently bad, it's a wonder they stick around: reality TV shows, fake crab and U.S. presidents being involved in fundraising.

Republicans have been in an uproar over President Obama attending fundraisers during rocket fire in the Middle East, tragedies in Ukraine and an immigration crisis. But they might be missing the point. The problem is not "when" a president chooses to go out to rake Benjamins, but that our chief executives does this at all.

Imagine how we would react if a presidential candidate told us, "Listen, if I'm elected I plan to go to many private dinners with ridiculously wealthy people. I won't tell you what we discuss, you'll have to dig if you want to see the guest list and at the end of the night, they'll give me buckets full of money. Everyone cool with that?"

I suspect that if it were put in those terms, Democrats, Republicans and Independents alike would howl like hounds because it sounds like a sound formula for corruption.

But the major parties love having presidents spend their precious time like two-bit telemarketers hawking vest-pocket fishing poles and kitchen gadgets.

The idea is so sacrosanct here in D.C. that I assume the NSA has put me on some sort of watch list just for questioning it.

I'm not singling out President Obama, because every administration enjoys this sport.

And I'm not suggesting that all lawmakers should give up on fundraising; but maybe presidents should, because they are charged above all others to serve the entire nation's interests.

Of course, this change will never happen. As much as every administration decries the influence of money in politics, with each election the cash dash just gets worse.

And it's hard even to hear ideas for real reform amid all those rustling dollars.

Holdout ends

Charles signs extension

Jamaal Charles' holdout ended almost before it began. The Chiefs running back agreed to a two-year, $28 million deal on the day Kansas City reported to training camp. Charles rushed for 1,287 yards and a league-high 12 touchdowns in 2013.

5 Classic moments in Eagles camp history

NFL. From Mamula to Papale we look back at memorable training camps.

Training Camp starts this weekend, and the hungry hordes of NFL writers will finally have something concrete to write about.

In anticipation of Chip Kelly's second camp as Eagles' skipper and with hopes that the Eagles might return to the playoffs with their second straight NFC East title, lets look back at some of the most memorable moments from training camps past.

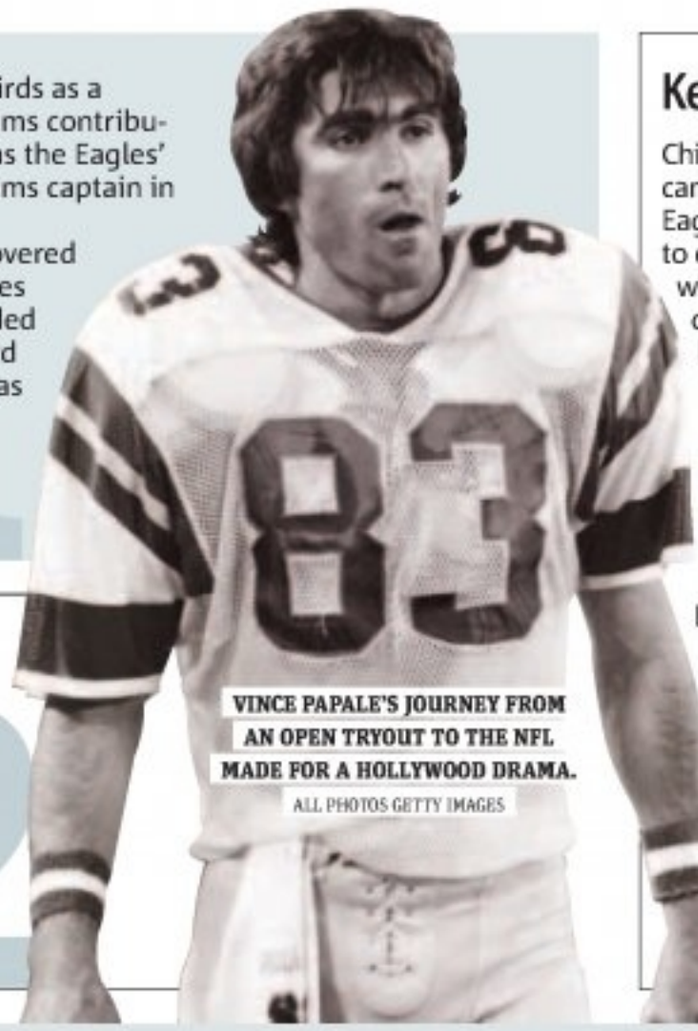
EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

5 InVincible

It's been almost 40 years since Vince Papale, a part-time teacher at Interboro High School inspired the movie "Invincible" by making the Eagles as an undrafted free agent during training camp in 1976.

It was a story for the ages, and one uniquely fit for Philadelphia. He played three seasons with the Birds as a special teams contributor and was the Eagles' special teams captain in 1978.

He recovered two fumbles and recorded one 15-yard reception as a pro.



VINCE PAPALE'S JOURNEY FROM AN OPEN TRYOUT TO THE NFL MADE FOR A HOLLYWOOD DRAMA.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

4 Mamula's mess

In 1997, Eagles defensive end Mike Mamula was accused of indecent exposure at a club in Bethlehem.

The charges were eventually dropped, but a media blitz took over camp and created one of the strangest incidents in recent Eagles memory.

3 Kelly arrives

Chip Kelly's first training camp at the helm of the Eagles last year did little to end speculation over what his high-powered offense would look like in the NFL. He wouldn't even talk about how exactly he planned to use Michael Vick, which turned out to be ironic in the end.

But he did bring a new age in the history of the storied franchise as the team eventually unveiled their record-setting offense and made an improbable playoff run in 2013.

2 'Dream Team'

Vince Young called the Eagles the "dream team" prior to training camp in 2011. And though on paper the team looked good enough to run away with the city's first-ever Super Bowl title, they went a meager 8-8.

THE VINCE YOUNG ERA WAS NOT A LONG ONE.

1 The Terrell Owens show

The Eagles were on a roll in 2004.

Fresh off a string of three straight NFC championship game appearances, the franchise added loudmouth wide receiver Terrell Owens from San Francisco and would eventually advance all the way to the Super Bowl.

On one hot afternoon that July, over 25,000 fans went to Lehigh University, with thousands more stuck in terrible traffic, seeking to watch Owens and the Birds get ready for their fateful season.

OWENS WAS NO STRANGER TO A LOT OF CONTROVERSY DURING HIS CAREER.

Johnson to miss four games for PED use

NFL. Lane Johnson said he mistakenly took a banned substance in April.

Eagles offensive tackle Lane Johnson was suspended four games by the NFL on Wednesday for violating the league's performance-enhancing substance policy.

Johnson, entering his second year as a force on the Eagles' line, said he "mistakenly and foolishly" took a prescription drug in the spring while training and did not clear it with Eagles trainers.

"I am extremely sorry for this mistake and I will learn from it and be smarter in the future," Johnson said in a statement. "I would like to sincerely apologize to Mr. Lurie, Howie Roseman, Coach Kelly and his staff, my teammates and our amazing Philadelphia Eagles fans."

Johnson will miss games against the Jaguars, Colts, Redskins and 49ers in the first month of the Birds' season.

Allen Barbre will likely start at right tackle in replace of Johnson.

Ruiz returns, Phils set to host Diamondbacks

After missing 26 games due to a concussion, catcher Carlos Ruiz was back in the lineup for the Phillies on Wednesday night against the Giants.

Prior to his stint on the disabled list, Ruiz was batting .257 with two homers and 14 RBIs in 66 games this season.

Ruiz will be with the ball club this weekend when the Phils host Arizona for three games.

Kyle Kendrick (4-10, 4.87 ERA) will get the ball for the Phils on Friday night while Wade Miley (6-6, 4.16 ERA) will throw for Arizona.

Cliff Lee (4-5, 3.67 ERA) is slated to go Saturday night while Josh Collmenter (8-5, 3.64 ERA) will start for the Diamondbacks.

Roberto Hernandez (4-8, 4.25 ERA) is scheduled to close out the series for the Phils in a Sunday matinee against Vidal Nuno (2-6, 5.13 ERA).

The Diamondbacks are struggling this season, owning a 44-57 record. MATT BURKE

Browns fan urinates on grave of Modell

An unidentified Cleveland Browns fan posted a YouTube video of himself urinating on the grave of late pro football owner Art Modell.

Modell moved the Browns franchise to Baltimore in 1996 and the team became the Ravens. Cleveland was awarded an expansion team several years later and the Browns name was restored.

The fan wore a Ravens jersey to the site but removed it to reveal a Browns jersey. He then urinated on the grave out of the bottom of his pants using a catheter.

"As far as pissing on your grave, I had no choice," the man said in the video — which now has over 10,000 hits.

Modell passed away in 2012. MATT BURKE

NBA. Sixers may look at acquiring Waiters in trade with Cavs

Cavs guard Dion Waiters is a Philly native. / GETTY IMAGES

By the numbers

15.9

Dion Waiters averaged 15.9 points, 3.0 assists and 2.8 rebounds per game in 2013-14 with the Cavaliers. He averaged 14.7 points per game in his rookie season of 2012-13.

Philadelphia native Dion Waiters could soon be coming home.

According to Fox Sports Ohio, the Sixers are interested in trading for the Cleveland shooting guard. The move would help the Cavaliers facilitate a potential Kevin Love trade with Minnesota. The 22-year-old out of Syracuse averaged 15.9 points per game in his second season. In both of his NBA seasons Waiters has put up solid offensive numbers for the Cavs as he averaged 14.7 points per game as a rookie in 2012-13.

The guard was the fourth overall pick in the 2012 NBA draft and was thought to be part of the Cavs' "backcourt of the future" along with Kyrie Irving.

Thaddeus Young's name has been floated as a player the Sixers would export. MATT BURKE

CAMP BATTLES FANTASY PLAYERS NEED TO WATCH

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN.

NFL news

David Wilson's return from neck surgery throws a wrench into the Giants' backfield. He's not a third-down option, but he brings an element the group currently lacks: game-breaking explosiveness.

Most of the battles during training camp involve fringe NFL players fighting for a job at the bottom of a 53-man roster. A select few of these duels will be for the right to start on fantasy teams.

Last year, Knowshon Moreno and Eddie Lacy separated from the pack midway through August and never looked back while carrying owners to titles. It's these kinds of observations that are the difference between winning and losing in fantasy.

Here's Johnny

Rolling up 20s in the bathroom and chilling with Justin Bieber has overshadowed what Johnny Manziel brings to the football field: running ability. Note that Browns offensive coordinator Kyle Shanahan was the OC when Robert Griffin III ran for 815 yards and threw for 3,200 as a rookie. The only problem is veteran Brian Hoyer, who heads to camp as the "starter" despite coming off a torn ACL. If Manziel can beat out the journeyman, he'll have borderline top-14 fantasy appeal.

Brian Hoyer, left, will be looking over Johnny Manziel's shoulder throughout training camp. / GETTY IMAGES

Other battles

- Ben Tate vs. Terrance West: We know the Shanahan zone-blocking scheme works. Who gets the Browns reps?
- T.Y. Hilton vs. Reggie Wayne: Will Wayne's knee be healthy enough to play every down for Indy? Hilton is a born playmaker.

Is Stacy solid?

Zac Stacy was a diamond in the rough last season, coming on in late October and functioning as a top-10 running back the rest of the way. The problem is that he did it with volume (23.7 touches per game over the final 11 weeks) and not even average per-touch production (3.9 yards per carry, 5.4 yards per reception). The Rams then went out and used a third-round pick on Auburn's Tre Mason. Stacy will enter the season as a starter, but he won't be worth an early round fantasy pick if Mason earns eight to 10 carries per game. Stacy needs volume to succeed.

Miller time

Lamar Miller was one of the league's biggest disasters last season, showing a lack of physicality while running behind an anemic offensive line and mind-numbing Mike Sherman scheme. But with ex-Eagles assistant Bill Lazor now at the controls of the Dolphins offense, the running game figures to be far improved. Miller moved well ahead of Knowshon Moreno during minicamp, but he'll have to show he can perform in pads with contact to keep it.

MLB pickups

Grab these guys off the waiver wire now:

- Danny Salazar, SP, Indians — He's back in the bigs and showing 2013 form. Strikeout upside is big here.
- Maikel Franco, 3B, Phillies — Once the Phillies do their fire sale, they'll find room for Franco. He's currently sizzling at Triple-A.
- Ken Giles, RP, Phillies — Jonathan Papelbon is perhaps the Phillie most likely to be traded. Giles has an electric right arm.
